

Vermont Chapter report for 2017

2017 has been another relatively quiet year here in Vermont.

In the northern part of the state, Kevin Williamson reports that the Gile Mountain access trail has been improved with additional stone and gravel. This work was performed by The Norwich Conservation Group. Damage to this trail occurred during a flash flood in early July.

In the Southern part of the state, we are awaiting the completion of work by the State Parks Crew on the Mt. Olga Tower.

The Caretakers at the Stratton Mountain Tower report the following visitor Numbers for the 2017 Year:

Appalachian Trail: 1,387

Long Trail: 400

Total: 8,400

Mount Mansfield Reported (Roughly) 40,000 visitors this year.
